A VISIT TO THE "MINUTE Men".
THE Interior and Exterior Aspect.

The heavy iron gates of the "Minute Men" were thrown open at the command of the Inspector General, and the "Minute Men" were in full view of the public for the first time since their organization. The interior of the building is grandly imposing, and the exterior is equally so. The main entrance is through a large archway, flanked by columns, and surmounted by a statue of Minerva. The hall is spacious, and the decorations are rich and elaborate. The chairs and benches are of polished wood, and the tables are of marble. The windows are large and the light is bright. The floor is covered with carpeting. The "Minute Men" are dressed in uniform, and the men are in the best of spirits. The women are in the best of health.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF C. E. CURTIS.

C. E. Curtis, Governor of the State of Massachusetts, has tendered his resignation, and has been accepted. The Governor has been a faithful and able officer, and his resignation is regretted by all who know him. The Governor has been instrumental in the organization of the "Minute Men," and has done much to promote their welfare. He has been a devoted public servant, and his resignation is mourned by the people of this State.

The "Minute Men" have occupied the old Arsenal at Charlestown, and have been in constant drill and order. They are under the command of the Governor, and are well equipped and trained. The men are in the best of spirits, and are determined to make a success of their duty. The Governor has given them a large stock of arms and ammunition, and they are now well armed and equipped. The "Minute Men" are a credit to the State, and are worthy of the confidence of the people.

THE TWO SISTERS.

By SARA H. WATSON.

The story is a simple one. Mary and Maria Parke, sisters, had been living together in the same house for many years. They had been inseparable, had shared all the trials and tribulations of life, and had grown very close. But one day, Mary suddenly died, leaving Maria alone and grieving. Maria was devastated, and it seemed as though her world had come to an end.

Maria had been a devoted and loving sister, always there for Mary when she needed her. But now, with Mary gone, Maria felt lost and alone. She missed her sister terribly, and the thought of having to live without her was almost too much to bear.

Days turned into weeks, and weeks into months. Maria tried to keep herself busy, to occupy her mind and soul with other things, but nothing seemed to fill the void left by Mary's passing. She missed her every day, and the pain of her loss only seemed to grow with time.

One day, Maria decided to take a walk in the park. As she strolled through the trees, the fresh spring air pharmaceutical the pain in her heart. She felt as though she could almost hear Mary's voice in the wind, guiding her through the park and the pain of her loss.

As she reached the pond, Maria saw a small bird sitting on the edge of the water. The bird was so beautiful, and it seemed as though Mary's spirit was watching over her. Maria felt a sense of peace wash over her, as though Mary was still with her, watching over her from above.

Maria sat down by the pond, and she began to think about her sister. She remembered all the good times they had shared, the laughs they had shared, and the love they had felt for each other. She felt a sense of gratitude for the time they had spent together, and she knew that she would always cherish those memories.

As she sat by the pond, Maria thought about the future. She knew that she would have to find a way to move on, to find a way to live without her sister. But for now, she was content to simply be with Mary in spirit, to feel her presence and know that she was always with her.

RURAL MATTERS.

WHITING the showers just now, when the blossoming bushes will be held fast by the rich, sweet, comfortable atmosphere, the birds will not do any damage by eating the buds. You may put them to good use by building a nest. They are the most desirable of all materials. The birds will do a great deal of good in the garden, and the nest will make a beautiful addition to the house. If you are not careful, they will be stowed away in the hayloft and the barns, where they will be destroyed by the cattle and horses.

THE CLOVER.

The clover is a most desirable plant, and the best way to preserve it is to plant it in the garden. It is a hardy, rapid-growing plant, and will thrive in any soil. It is a great improvement over the old-fashioned clover, and is much more nutritious. It is a great improvement over the old-fashioned clover, and is much more nutritious.
