The President and Members of Congress.
ST. LOUIS, MO., May 20, 1861.

The news from the West is most encouraging. The troops from the West are advancing with great rapidity and are in fine condition. The government is making every effort to secure the loyalists and to suppress the rebellion. The people of the North are determined to maintain the Union and to put down the rebellion at all hazards. The President has declared that he will use every means in his power to suppress the rebellion and that he will not yield an inch of territory to the rebels. The people of the North are determined to support the government and to enforce the laws of the land.

The people of the South are determined to resist the北部 and to maintain their independence. The rebels are organizing a strong army and are preparing for a great struggle. The people of the South are determined to defend their homes and their liberties. The President has declared that he will use every means in his power to suppress the rebellion and that he will not yield an inch of territory to the rebels. The people of the South are determined to support the government and to enforce the laws of the land.
