The news from the south is still such as to make the people of the north apprehensive of a much more extensive and bloody conflict than has hitherto been anticipated. The evacuation of Harpers Ferry by the rebels has, we are told, caused the most serious apprehensions among the people of the northern states. The rebels have not only possession of the town, but of the surrounding country, and are in a position to cut off the communication with the north. The people are said to be in a state of great alarm, and to be preparing for the worst. We learn that the government has called for 50,000 volunteers, and that the call is met with a spirit of patriotism and devotion to the cause of freedom. The people of the north are rallyi
