A WORD TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Herefore we have been sending the "Spectator" only to those who had paid for it, but the demand for the paper has been so great that the press has been sent up to the time of the expiration of its publication by the destruction of a portion of the stock. The "Spectator" will be sent to all on the subscription list who can be reached by the present telegraph lines. Those who will receive it now, to whom it has not been sent heretofore, will know from that fact that they are subscribers.

We know that our subscribers are responsible for the paper, and we appreciate the propriety of doing so, as early as possible. We desire to send it to all our subscribers, but cannot do so unless they pay promptly. We would like to extend the period during which the paper is sent, but we know that the very best subscription of any kind has great difficulty in getting money, but the destruction of the office and the loss of all our capital, the exigencies of the Confederate government, render it impossible for us to collect as early as we might otherwise have done. The paper will be enlarged in a few weeks to double its size, and it is our present intention to make it as important as possible, as soon as the prompt payment of subscribers will enable us to do so.

BEFORE AND DURING THE WAR.

In the beginning of the war, as related by Gen. Hunter, in his History of the Valley, and as given in the "Valley and Mountain News" of this date, Gen. Hunter states that he was one of the early leaders of the Confederate armies, which occurred after, the election of the Southern States. The Confederacy was established, and the government of the Southern States was established. The war began in 1861, and we have had the editorial war for government, and the war is still with us, and we are still in it.

FEDERAL AND CONFEDERATE.

There were more Federal soldiers in the field at the close of the war than there were Confederate soldiers. The total number of Federal soldiers was over 1,500,000, while the total number of Confederate soldiers was under 800,000. The Federal soldiers had more munitions of war, and the Confederate soldiers had less. The Federal soldiers had more advantages than the Confederate soldiers. The Federal soldiers had more opportunities to command, and the Confederate soldiers had less opportunities.

NEW ADVERTISEMENT.

DISINTERESTED.

We have always been interested in the welfare of the Southern States, and we have always been interested in the welfare of the United States. We have always been interested in the welfare of the Southern States, and we have always been interested in the welfare of the United States.

RESTORATION OF CIVIL RIGHTS.

The Louisville Journal quotes approvingly a recent article, urging the importance of restoring civil rights as rapidly as possible to all those who have not committed any offense against society. The Journal remarks that the importance is "true to the letter of the law," and that it is the duty of the American people to support those who have committed no crime, as well as those who have committed offenses. The Journal also states that the restoration of civil rights is necessary for the national health and happiness, and that it will be the duty of the American people to support those who have committed no offense against society.

SOUTHERNERS IN THE WAR.

Governor Parrott, in his proclamation to the people of South Carolina, says: "The Southern lion, in the vestiges of his power, is gazing, with a sigh of despair, upon the loss of his British samovar; and the Southern elephant, in the dust of his vanquished destiny, is groaning, with a cry of anguish, as he sees the last of his splendid mahogany bed. But the Southern eagle will still have the fullest of time to contemplate the perils of his independence; and the Southern serpent will still have the power of his own tongue to seduce the Southern fox, and of his own strength to subdue the Southern wolf."
