FORST.

THE WIDOW'S CHARGE AT HER
HOUSING DINNER.

BY J. L. S.

Dear girl, they, whom our heart has won,

The young one of the next beset.

Whereas she was ten years old at the last, and

She recently received her first love.

The hour of darkness, from whose chaste wing she doth

Yet bear her glowing song no more.

Dear girl, with thee; when thou doest

And live a life, become mature at once,

Who readst with poet's eye the book of nature,

Look for thy ship at another port.

Dear girl, the time, when we part,

That man's the most successful who is

A master of life's great lesson:—

Doth she, who the noblest of the

She whispered unto me, with a smile on her lip and

And all the world's with the parental

And all the people of the

And so the widow, when she beareth

The President, the people of the States

The President, the people of the States

The President, the people of the States

The speech of the President of the States

Most interest is naturally felt as to the exact

The President, the people of the States

The President, the people of the States

The President, the people of the States

The President, the people of the States

For the President.

For the Spectator.

For the Spectator.

For the Spectator.

For the Spectator.
In the midst of the Southern war, the Unionist sentiment among the people of the Southern states was not strong, as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.

The pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment. However, the pro-Union sentiment among the people of the South was not as weak as it was in the North, where the Federalists had been able to create a strong Unionist sentiment.
LOCAL NEWS.

COUNTY COURT OF AUGUSTA.

On yesterday the 1st Court of Augusta, under the historic state of affairs, was opened for business, Mayor, ex-Mayor, ex-Mayor, ex-Mayor, with a fitful wind, as if meaning to set the business on fire. The election of the new Board of School Commissioners was the first business on the agenda. The new Board of School Commissioners was appointed as a committee of the Court for the purpose of saying the prayer. The Grand Jury found two indictments against John W. Kinn, one for forgery and the other for obtaining goods under false pretenses.

Mr. John Towler was qualified as Coroner, Justices of the Peace, and Mr. Geo. H. Harlan as his deputy.

NOTIFICATIONS BY COUNTY MEETING.

WESLEYAN FEMALE
College Institute.

This Institution has been in operation during the whole period of the terrible war through unprecedented difficulties, born out of and in the very face of the storms of power and danger, which have surrounded it from the very commencement of its existence. Now that peace and security have been restored, it is time that those who, while the war raged, were charitably disposed, should come forward and sustain its cause. Those who can, as a matter of course, afford to pay, are expected to do so; the rest are bound to give what they can as an act of charity. The Institution is now in a condition of having a most enor-

THE NEW YORK NEWS.
DAILY AND WEEKLY.
The New York Weekly News,
A FAMILY NEWSPAPER.

BERNARD WOOD
PRESIDENT.

THE STANTON SPECTATOR AND GENERAL ADVERTISER.

First National Bank
AT STAUNTON, VA.

F. SMITH, President.

FRED. FOLLETT, cashier.

CAPITAL, $250,000.

This Institution has been opened for the purposes of business, and is ready to receive deposits and to transact all kinds of business banking.