DIFFICULTIES BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN.

On the Island of Kilauea by

We have already noticed the difficulty of the dispute between the United States and Great Britain, arising from the occupation by the United States of the Island of Kilauea in the Sandwich Islands. The dispute is now approached by the United States in a manner that promises a satisfactory termination.

Mr. Franklin, who has been appointed by the President of the United States as the special representative of the American Government, has arrived in London for the purpose of negotiating a treaty for the settlement of the dispute. Mr. Franklin is accompanied by a large body of American ministers and officials, who have been instructed to carry on the negotiations in the most active and efficient manner.

The American Government has also sent a large body of armed forces to the Island of Kilauea, under the command of Captain Pike, who has been instructed to use force, if necessary, to maintain the rights of the United States in the dispute.

The British Government has also sent a large body of armed forces to the Island of Kilauea, under the command of Captain Fox, who has been instructed to use force, if necessary, to maintain the rights of Great Britain in the dispute.

The dispute has now reached a crisis, and it is to be hoped that a satisfactory settlement will be arrived at in the near future.

FOR PRESIDENT,
JEREMIAH S. BLACK

A Party of the Democratic Convention of Pennsylvania performed a spectacular and unexpected maneuver in New York, Maryland and other states during the Convention season. According to reports, they had purposefully collected the votes of individuals who had been appointed as electors but had not voted in the presidential election. These votes were then transferred to their candidate, on the ballot of which Black was listed as a non-candidate. This clever strategy resulted in Black being elected President with a majority of electoral votes. The Democratic Party's national convention was held in Philadelphia in September 1859, and Black's victory was a significant milestone in the party's history.
