We observe that the spirit of the Pennsylvania Railroad is doing them a favor in this connection. On the one hand, their action is not very popular, but on the other hand, it will probably make them more efficient in the end.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has recently announced that it will not permit any person to occupy the right-of-way without the proper permission. This decision has been made after much consideration, and it is believed to be for the best interest of the railroad. It is hoped that this action will prevent any future inconvenience or damage to the public caused by unauthorized persons on the right-of-way.

We understand that the railroad is planning to extend its service to additional points, which will be a great benefit to the people in those areas. The company is also considering the construction of new tracks and improvements, which will further enhance the efficiency and reliability of its service.

In conclusion, while the Pennsylvania Railroad's actions may not be popular at first, they are undoubtedly taking the necessary steps to ensure the smooth operation of its services. We believe that the company is acting in the best interests of its shareholders and the public, and we look forward to seeing the improvements that will result from this decision.
