MEN-OF-WAR IN YORK.

A feeling of awe pervaded my mind as I entered the museum of the Peabody Museum of American History, which is dedicated to the preservation of the decorative and practical arts in American history. The museum is housed in a large building, located on the corner of Boylston and Mass. Ave in Harvard Square, and is open to the public.

There are several exhibits on the first floor, including artifacts from the paleolithic and neolithic periods, as well as cultures that have been historically important to American history. The exhibits are well-lit and arranged in a logical sequence, allowing visitors to easily follow the timeline of American history.

One of the highlights of the museum is the collection of Native American artifacts, which includes pottery, textiles, and jewelry. These artifacts are displayed in a space that is dedicated to the indigenous peoples of North America, and provides an excellent overview of their culture and history.

The museum also has a collection of objects related to the American Revolution, including weapons and personal items of soldiers. These items provide a glimpse into the daily lives of people during that time period.

Overall, the Peabody Museum of American History is a fantastic resource for anyone interested in American history. The exhibits are well-curated and informative, making it an enjoyable and educational experience for visitors of all ages.

LOCAL NEWS.

Extension of the Borough.

A number of prominent citizens, headed by Fred Flanagan and others, are on the lookout for the annexation of the land north of the school district to the Borough of Chambersburg. They feel that the present limits of the borough are insufficient for the needs of the community and propose to extend the territory to the eastward, including the land north of the school district. This move is supported by many residents who believe it will benefit the town in various ways.

School Report.

The school board has authorized the inclusion of the population of the rural districts in the school district, which is to be extended to the eastward of the present limits, including the land north of the present school district. This move is supported by many residents who believe it will benefit the town in various ways.

Chamberlain and Cozy.

Chamberlain and Cozy, of the lumber company, have agreed to sell their lumber to the school district, which will provide the necessary material for the construction of the new school building. The terms of the agreement are favorable to the school district, and the lumber company is expected to benefit from the increased demand for its products.

Educational.

The Borough Council has approved the appointment of a committee to visit the educational institutions in the vicinity and to report on their efficiency and effectiveness. The committee is expected to report soon, and the Borough Council will take action on the recommendations of the committee.

New Advertisements.

Several new advertisements have appeared in the local newspapers, including that of the new business establishment of David L. Cooper, located at 120 Main Street. The business is expected to open soon, and the community is looking forward to the addition of this new enterprise to the local commercial scene.
