VALLEY SPIRIT—JUNE 6, '60.

JULIE DUGAS.

The Vanderlinden case was brought before the Supreme Court by the right of the Petitioners, 184 days of the term. The cause was a libel suit in which the Petitioner, a newspaper publisher, was charged with libel against the Federal Government. The Court ruled in favor of the Petitioner, upholding the right of the press to publish critical articles about the government. This decision was seen as a victory for freedom of the press.

The opinion of the Court was written by Justice Louis Brandeis, who later became a Supreme Court Justice himself. The case was significant because it established the principle that the government could not suppress speech that criticized it, which is a cornerstone of freedom of the press in the United States.
