A NEW REPEAL MACHINE.

A large and handsome machine has come on the market, which is said to be the most perfect and serviceable of its kind. It is constructed on the principle of a lever, and is provided with a number of levers, each of which is graduated to represent a certain amount of money. The machine is worked by a handle, which is turned in such a manner as to move the levers in a circular motion. The amount of money represented by each lever is shown by a pointer, which is graduated to correspond with the amount of money. The machine is also provided with a balance, which is used to determine the amount of money that has been put into the machine. The machine is constructed of the best materials, and is said to be the most durable and serviceable machine of its kind. It is sold at a moderate price, and is recommended for use by all classes of people.

The Election.

The election is over, and so far as we can judge, we have no longer any reason to expect any change in the Union. The new writer, now in the Mansion House at Washington, as President Lincoln, will, we believe, be able to carry the Constitution and the Union to its natural relations with the other States of the Union. The United States Senate.

The United States Senate, being largely in the majority in both of the legislative bodies, have already declared their intention of distinguishing the duties of the various distinguished individuals for whom the States of the Union have chosen. The Senate is in possession of the necessary powers to make such distinctions as may be necessary to protect the Constitution and the Union from any attempts to subvert it.
