May 22

At noon today, Lieutenant-General Dwight was notified by the telegraph that the city of New York had been captured by the Federals. He was ordered to proceed to that city immediately, and took up his quarters in the city on the evening of the same day. The Federal forces had occupied the city without opposition, and were in possession of the finest harbor on the Atlantic coast.

The naval force, consisting of the United States warships, was under the command of Admiral David G. Farragut. The fleet consisted of the following vessels:

1. U.S.S. Monitor - Captain Robert E. Lee
2. U.S.S. Wisconsin - Captain John A. Dahlgren
5. U.S.S. Illinois - Captain John A. Dahlgren
6. U.S.S. Minnesota - Captain John A. Dahlgren
7. U.S.S. Indiana - Captain John A. Dahlgren
8. U.S.S. Ohio - Captain John A. Dahlgren

The fleet was equipped with the most modern armament, and was well supplied with provisions and water. The men of the fleet were in high spirits, and the officers were confident of success.

The fleet was ordered to proceed to the mouth of the Mississippi River, where it would be ready to strike at the heart of the Confederacy as soon as the river was opened to navigation.

The naval forces were accompanied by a force of 5,000 men under the command of General Ulysses S. Grant, who was ordered to join the fleet at the mouth of the Mississippi River.

The fleet was received with jubilation by the people of New York, who lined the streets to welcome the victorious troops. The city was decorated with flags and streamers, and the streets were thronged with people.

The Federal forces occupied the city without opposition, and were in possession of the finest harbor on the Atlantic coast.
