FROM WASHINGTON.

H. B. ROGERS, in an article in the New York Nation, says that the Washington Senate has adjourned to Hagerstown, and that the House of Representatives is now in session there. The members of the House of Representatives are said to be strongly in favor of the measures recommended by the President, and are expected to take the necessary steps to secure their adoption. The House is expected to adjourn to Washington on the 12th of the month. The Senate is expected to adjourn to Washington on the 15th of the month.

FROM MEMPHIS.

The editor of the Memphis Union says that the city is in a state of excitement, and that the people are looking forward with great anxiety to the result of the election. The election is said to be very close, and the people are divided in their opinion as to the outcome. The editor expresses confidence that the people will do their duty, and that the result will be a fair one.

FROM PHILADELPHIA.

The Philadelphia Inquirer says that the Pennsylvania Railroad is in a state of suspense, and that the people are looking forward with great anxiety to the result of the election. The election is said to be very close, and the people are divided in their opinion as to the outcome. The editor expresses confidence that the people will do their duty, and that the result will be a fair one.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Washington Post says that the United States Senate is in a state of suspense, and that the people are looking forward with great anxiety to the result of the election. The election is said to be very close, and the people are divided in their opinion as to the outcome. The editor expresses confidence that the people will do their duty, and that the result will be a fair one.

FROM PHILADELPHIA.

The Philadelphia Inquirer says that the Pennsylvania Railroad is in a state of suspense, and that the people are looking forward with great anxiety to the result of the election. The election is said to be very close, and the people are divided in their opinion as to the outcome. The editor expresses confidence that the people will do their duty, and that the result will be a fair one.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Washington Post says that the United States Senate is in a state of suspense, and that the people are looking forward with great anxiety to the result of the election. The election is said to be very close, and the people are divided in their opinion as to the outcome. The editor expresses confidence that the people will do their duty, and that the result will be a fair one.

FROM PHILADELPHIA.

The Philadelphia Inquirer says that the Pennsylvania Railroad is in a state of suspense, and that the people are looking forward with great anxiety to the result of the election. The election is said to be very close, and the people are divided in their opinion as to the outcome. The editor expresses confidence that the people will do their duty, and that the result will be a fair one.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Washington Post says that the United States Senate is in a state of suspense, and that the people are looking forward with great anxiety to the result of the election. The election is said to be very close, and the people are divided in their opinion as to the outcome. The editor expresses confidence that the people will do their duty, and that the result will be a fair one.
Nineteen Days—The first moves of the day were made by the 1st Division of the Army of the Potomac, which moved from its camp at Fairfax Court House to the vicinity of Centreville, Va. The division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Banks, consisted of three brigades, each of which was under the command of a major general. The movement was made in response to a telegraphic message from Gen. Pope, commanding the Army of Virginia, requesting the 1st Division to join him at Centreville on the 20th. The division was to play a significant role in the upcoming battle of Second Bull Run, also known as the Second Manassas.

The Battle of Second Bull Run

The battle was fought near Manassas, Virginia, on August 29, 1862, during the American Civil War. It was the second major battle of the war and was fought between Union and Confederate forces. The battle resulted in a Confederate victory, which boosted Confederate morale and led to a period of Confederate.drawString(1127,115,1127,115)activity in the eastern theater of the war. The Union forces, commanded by Maj. Gen. Pope, were outnumbered and outmaneuvered by Confederate forces led by Maj. Gen. Robert E. Lee. The Union's defeat at Second Bull Run marked a turning point in the war, as it led to a reevaluation of Union strategy and a realignment of forces. The battle is remembered as one of the most significant engagements of the Civil War and had a profound impact on the course of the conflict.