A Hong Kong paper contains the following account of the voluntary sacrifice of life by a Chinese widow.

A case of voluntary sacrifice of life by a young Chinese woman has lately taken place in Hong Kong. The facts are briefly as follows: A young girl, the daughter of a poor family, was sent to Hong Kong to find employment, and was engaged by a man who promised to make her a partner in his business. The girl was deceived by the man, and was eventually thrown into a house of ill-fame. She attempted to escape, but was caught and kept in custody. She refused to return to her home, and was kept in slavery. She finally died from starvation, and her body was thrown into the street. Her father, who had been searching for her, found her body and took it to the morgue, where it was examined by the doctors. They found that the girl had died from starvation, and that she had been kept in slavery. The father then took the girl's body and returned it to China. He had her buried in the grave of her ancestors, and the grave was marked with a stone tablet. The man who had kept the girl in slavery was arrested, and was later executed. The father then returned to China, and lived the rest of his life in poverty, but he was satisfied that justice had been done. He had lived in China for many years, and was well known for his honesty and integrity.
A cutting from the Warren Intelligencer:

"A very generous man was visited by a poor and ragged fellow, who petitioned for a small sum of money, which the generous one refused. The petitioner then said, "I know you. I am the same man that you gave money to last week."

"I know you," replied the generous man, "but that was not the man I gave money to last week."

"I am the same man," answered the petitioner, "I was then poor and hungry, but now I am rich and well-fed.""

THE SOUTHERN LEADER.

POSSIBILITY OF THE WAR.

Congressmen of the United States are now in session, and their attention has been called to the possibility of the war being continued. The Senate has passed a resolution expressing the opinion that the war is not at an end, and that it is not likely to be brought to a close in the near future. The House of Representatives has also passed a resolution expressing the same opinion.

The possibility of the war being continued is due to the fact that the Confederate States have not yet surrendered. The Confederate States are in rebellion against the United States, and until they surrender, the war will continue.

The possibility of the war being continued is also due to the fact that the United States Government has not yet given up all hope of a peaceful settlement. The United States Government is still willing to negotiate with the Confederate States for a peaceful settlement, and until such a settlement is reached, the war will continue.

The possibility of the war being continued is also due to the fact that the Confederate States are still in possession of a large portion of the territory of the United States. The Confederate States are still in possession of a large portion of the territory of the United States, and until they are driven out, the war will continue.

The possibility of the war being continued is also due to the fact that the United States Government is still willing to grant the Confederate States a large amount of money and supplies.

The possibility of the war being continued is also due to the fact that the Confederate States are still in possession of a large number of guns and other military supplies.
