The following is a portion of a historical document titled "Valley Spirit" dated December 11, 1862.

The text of the document is not fully visible, but it contains the following paragraph:

"The important address of the President of the United States, delivered at the inauguration of the new Government, has been published in the press, and is a valuable addition to the literature of the country. It is a spirited and eloquent defense of the Union, and contains many valuable suggestions for the improvement of the public service. The President has also given a clear exposition of the principles upon which the Government is founded, and has shown the necessity of a strong and efficient central authority.

The address is a wise and statesmanlike exposition of the principles of the Government, and is calculated to inspire confidence in its stability and efficacy. The President has also given a clear exposition of the principles upon which the Government is founded, and has shown the necessity of a strong and efficient central authority.

The rest of the document is not fully visible due to the cropping of the image.
nothing occurred in the State's special session, which was adjourned over till Monday, December 14.

The Legislature will be preceded by the Philadelphia papers, who are now shaping up their arguments and denouncing the administration of the late governor and the "tie:" A large bunch of papers are in a state of great excitement over the present administration, and the govern- ment is to be expected. It is interesting to observe the manner in which the administration is being led.

The governor has been quoted as saying that his first move will be to形状 up the administration of the late governor and the "tie:" A large bunch of papers are in a state of great excitement over the present administration, and the govern-ment is to be expected.
