VALEXY SPIRIT.

December 18, 1881.

A LONG JOURNEY WAS TO BEAK.

At the name of Cole's Hotel, many a heart was lighted up with joy! Old conditions were done away with, and the new ones, so long looked for, were at last to be enjoyed. Cole, with his bustling life and his ever-ready spirit of geniality, had been the despair of all who knew him; and the news of his death was like a shock to the community.

The funeral took place at the village church, and was attended by a large congregation. The Rev. Mr. Smith, the minister of the congregation, preached a beautiful and touching sermon, and the service was concluded with a prayer by the Rev. Mr. Brown.

The body was then removed to the burial ground, and placed in the earth. It was a sad scene, and many tears were shed by the friends of the deceased. As the coffin was lowered into the grave, the sad thoughts of the past and the future passed through the minds of those present. The earth closed over the remains, and the funeral was ended.

The next day, the friends of the deceased paid their last respects to the body in its resting place. They stood around the grave, and, as the sun shed its last ray of light on the earth, they bade a sad farewell to their departed friend. The grass was soft and green beneath their feet, and the birds sang their sad song. The wind blew gently, and the trees whispered their regrets. It was a sad scene, and many tears were shed by those who knew and loved the deceased.

The sun set, and the night fell. The stars shone in the sky, and the moon cast its silver light on the earth. The wind blew still, and the trees whispered their regrets. It was a sad scene, and many tears were shed by those who knew and loved the deceased.

The night passed, and the dawn broke. The sun arose, and cast its warm rays on the earth. The birds sang their song of joy, and the wind blew gently. The trees whispered their congratulations on the return of the departed friend. It was a happy scene, and many smiles were exchanged by those who knew and loved the deceased.
