VALLEY SPIRIT.

CHAMBERSBURG, PA.

VOLUME 15.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 12, 1862.

NUMBER 31.

Congressional.

Mondays, Feb. 10th.

In the House, pursuant to an order of the House, Mr. Lee submitted, he made a motion that the House should adjourn. It was opposed by Mr. Sumner, who said that the House should not adjourn until it had completed its business. Mr. Lee then withdrew his motion. The House then adjourned.

The House of Representatives met at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and adjourned until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

War News.

Sunday, Feb. 12th.

According to reports received from the War Department, the Union forces are advancing towards the Confederate capital, Richmond. The Union army is said to be in good condition, and is expected to arrive in Richmond within the next few days.

The Union forces are said to be well supplied with provisions, and are in good condition for further advance. The Confederate forces are said to be in a state of great confusion, and are not able to resist the Union army. The Union forces are expected to capture Richmond within the next few days.

A Special Message.

Mr. A. B. JENKINS

Lieutenant-Colonel, 2nd Wisconsin Volunteers.

A TELLING CASE OF SPELLING.

In a school day in Maine, where the spelling lesson is taught, a pupil was absent. When he returned to school, he was asked to write his name. He wrote "J. A. Jenkins," and then said, "I know my name is J. A. Jenkins." The teacher told him that he had spelt his name correctly, and that he had done a good job. The pupil replied, "I know my name is J. A. Jenkins," and then said, "I know my name is J. A. Jenkins." The teacher told him that he had spelt his name correctly, and that he had done a good job.

A LOCAL ACTIVITY.

The local Republican organization of the town of Monticello, in Wisconsin, met on Saturday night, and discussed the situation in the State, and the prospects for the election. The meeting was well attended, and was characterized by a strong feeling of patriotism and purpose.

The town of Monticello is in a state of great excitement, and the Republicans are determined to carry the State to the Union. The meeting was held in the town hall, and was well attended.

The town of Monticello is in a state of great excitement, and the Republicans are determined to carry the State to the Union. The meeting was held in the town hall, and was well attended.

The town of Monticello is in a state of great excitement, and the Republicans are determined to carry the State to the Union. The meeting was held in the town hall, and was well attended.

The town of Monticello is in a state of great excitement, and the Republicans are determined to carry the State to the Union. The meeting was held in the town hall, and was well attended.

The town of Monticello is in a state of great excitement, and the Republicans are determined to carry the State to the Union. The meeting was held in the town hall, and was well attended.

The town of Monticello is in a state of great excitement, and the Republicans are determined to carry the State to the Union. The meeting was held in the town hall, and was well attended.

The town of Monticello is in a state of great excitement, and the Republicans are determined to carry the State to the Union. The meeting was held in the town hall, and was well attended.

The town of Monticello is in a state of great excitement, and the Republicans are determined to carry the State to the Union. The meeting was held in the town hall, and was well attended.
VALLEY SPIRIT.

February 12, 1863

A STORY FOR THE LITTLE PEOPLE

Bill Homer, he was called, in the whole town; so his mother's side of the story was told, and Bill pondered over it with a pride that made his head to spin. His father's side of the story was always told, but it was not a bad tale by any means. As a matter of fact, he had been talking to his father about it the night before. He was going to tell Bill about the man who had been his friend, and how he had found Bill in the woods one day, when he was only six years old. Bill had been wandering around, and where he found Bill he told him about his friend, and how he had been doing for Bill. So he was called Bill Homer, and he was the only boy in the whole school who had been called Bill Homer.

Miss Maynard made no reply, but went on talking, and the children gossiped among themselves. Bill sat by her, thinking of all the things he had heard her say. The teacher was very tired, and had to stop for a rest. She was very kind to the children, and they liked her very much.

The next morning, Mrs. Grant came to the door, and said, "Good morning, Miss Maynard." The teacher looked up and smiled. "Good morning, Mrs. Grant," she said. "I hope you have a good day." Mrs. Grant nodded, and went on her way. The teacher turned to the children and said, "I hope you have a good day, too." The children all said, "Yes, Miss Maynard," and went on with their work.

The next morning, Mrs. Grant came to the door again, and said, "Good morning, Miss Maynard." The teacher smiled and said, "Good morning, Mrs. Grant." Mrs. Grant nodded, and went on her way. The teacher turned to the children and said, "I hope you have a good day, too." The children all said, "Yes, Miss Maynard," and went on with their work.

Miss Maynard was a very kind teacher, and the children all liked her very much. She was always happy, and never seemed to be troubled by anything. She was very good at her work, and the children all learned a lot from her. She was very popular with the parents, and they all liked her very much.

The next morning, Mrs. Grant came to the door, and said, "Good morning, Miss Maynard." The teacher smiled and said, "Good morning, Mrs. Grant." Mrs. Grant nodded, and went on her way. The teacher turned to the children and said, "I hope you have a good day, too." The children all said, "Yes, Miss Maynard," and went on with their work.

The next morning, Mrs. Grant came to the door, and said, "Good morning, Miss Maynard." The teacher smiled and said, "Good morning, Mrs. Grant." Mrs. Grant nodded, and went on her way. The teacher turned to the children and said, "I hope you have a good day, too." The children all said, "Yes, Miss Maynard," and went on with their work.

The next morning, Mrs. Grant came to the door, and said, "Good morning, Miss Maynard." The teacher smiled and said, "Good morning, Mrs. Grant." Mrs. Grant nodded, and went on her way. The teacher turned to the children and said, "I hope you have a good day, too." The children all said, "Yes, Miss Maynard," and went on with their work.

The next morning, Mrs. Grant came to the door, and said, "Good morning, Miss Maynard." The teacher smiled and said, "Good morning, Mrs. Grant." Mrs. Grant nodded, and went on her way. The teacher turned to the children and said, "I hope you have a good day, too." The children all said, "Yes, Miss Maynard," and went on with their work.

The next morning, Mrs. Grant came to the door, and said, "Good morning, Miss Maynard." The teacher smiled and said, "Good morning, Mrs. Grant." Mrs. Grant nodded, and went on her way. The teacher turned to the children and said, "I hope you have a good day, too." The children all said, "Yes, Miss Maynard," and went on with their work.

The next morning, Mrs. Grant came to the door, and said, "Good morning, Miss Maynard." The teacher smiled and said, "Good morning, Mrs. Grant." Mrs. Grant nodded, and went on her way. The teacher turned to the children and said, "I hope you have a good day, too." The children all said, "Yes, Miss Maynard," and went on with their work.

The next morning, Mrs. Grant came to the door, and said, "Good morning, Miss Maynard." The teacher smiled and said, "Good morning, Mrs. Grant." Mrs. Grant nodded, and went on her way. The teacher turned to the children and said, "I hope you have a good day, too." The children all said, "Yes, Miss Maynard," and went on with their work.

The next morning, Mrs. Grant came to the door, and said, "Good morning, Miss Maynard." The teacher smiled and said, "Good morning, Mrs. Grant." Mrs. Grant nodded, and went on her way. The teacher turned to the children and said, "I hope you have a good day, too." The children all said, "Yes, Miss Maynard," and went on with their work.

The next morning, Mrs. Grant came to the door, and said, "Good morning, Miss Maynard." The teacher smiled and said, "Good morning, Mrs. Grant." Mrs. Grant nodded, and went on her way. The teacher turned to the children and said, "I hope you have a good day, too." The children all said, "Yes, Miss Maynard," and went on with their work.
February 24, 1863

COLUMBUS, NEWSPAPER OF THE UNION FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE UNION.

The Editor.

The people of the United States have been long accustomed to the idea of an American Union that is strong in numbers, but not in the passions of its citizens. The Union, as a political entity, has been built on the principles of equality, liberty, and justice, and its citizens have been expected to support these principles in all of their actions. However, recent events have shown that the Union, as it exists today, is far from perfect. The recent battle at Fredericksburg has shown that the Union is not invincible, and that the Union's citizens are not always willing to support its principles.

Despite these challenges, the Union remains strong. The Union's citizens, including its soldiers, are determined to preserve the Union and its principles. The Union's leaders, including the President, are committed to defending the Union and its citizens. The Union, as a political entity, is strong, and it will continue to be strong.

The Editor.

The people of the United States have been long accustomed to the idea of an American Union that is strong in numbers, but not in the passions of its citizens. The Union, as a political entity, has been built on the principles of equality, liberty, and justice, and its citizens have been expected to support these principles in all of their actions. However, recent events have shown that the Union, as it exists today, is far from perfect. The recent battle at Fredericksburg has shown that the Union is not invincible, and that the Union's citizens are not always willing to support its principles.

Despite these challenges, the Union remains strong. The Union's citizens, including its soldiers, are determined to preserve the Union and its principles. The Union's leaders, including the President, are committed to defending the Union and its citizens. The Union, as a political entity, is strong, and it will continue to be strong.

The Editor.

The people of the United States have been long accustomed to the idea of an American Union that is strong in numbers, but not in the passions of its citizens. The Union, as a political entity, has been built on the principles of equality, liberty, and justice, and its citizens have been expected to support these principles in all of their actions. However, recent events have shown that the Union, as it exists today, is far from perfect. The recent battle at Fredericksburg has shown that the Union is not invincible, and that the Union's citizens are not always willing to support its principles.

Despite these challenges, the Union remains strong. The Union's citizens, including its soldiers, are determined to preserve the Union and its principles. The Union's leaders, including the President, are committed to defending the Union and its citizens. The Union, as a political entity, is strong, and it will continue to be strong.
LOCAL NEWS

The Post—We are sure that no small amount of attention has been paid to the recent political campaigns in this city, and that, in fact, they have been the chief topic of conversation among the voters. It is to be hoped that the results will be such as to give a fair representation of the people's will in the forthcoming elections.

The Twenty—We are happy to announce that the Twenty of Washington will celebrate their birthday this year with a grand festival. The festivities will include a parade, a ball, and a grand reception. The event is expected to draw a large crowd, and everyone is invited to attend.

The Old Pals' Convention—The Old Pals' Convention is scheduled for next weekend, and it promises to be a memorable event. The convention will feature speeches, heartwarming reunions, and a final salute to the veterans of the war.

THE MARKETS

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

THE CASH SYSTEM

CHEAP GOODS

GARMENTS

ADVERTISMENTS