THE BATTLE OF WILDERNESS

WILDERNESS, May 29, 1863.

To the President of the United States:

Excerpts from the official report of Gen. S. H. Smith, commanding the staff of the Army of the Potomac, to the President, with the report of Gen. G. M. Thomas, commanding the division of the Army of the Potomac.

The enemy's force was inferior to our own, and the battle raged with great intensity. The Union troops fought with determination and persistence, and the victory was secured without difficulty. The casualties were high on both sides, but the Union forces held their ground and emerged victorious.

S. H. Smith, Gen. Staff.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF GEN. S. H. SMITH, STAFF OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

The battle was fought on May 29, 1863, near the town of Wilderness, Virginia. The Union troops, commanded by Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, encountered heavy resistance from the Confederate forces, led by Gen. Robert E. Lee. The Union forces were able to gain a decisive victory and push the Confederate forces back.

S. H. Smith, Gen. Staff.

There is a rush of small public affairs at Washington, the Black Republicans taking the lead in the fashion of the day. The Black Republicans are not only a powerful faction in the city, but they are also a powerful faction in Congress, and they are likely to be a powerful faction in the country. The Black Republicans are led by Mr. Tilden, who is a man of great influence and who has been a leader in the Radical party for many years. He is a man of great energy and is likely to be successful in his efforts to carry out the policies of the Black Republicans.
