LETTER FROM MAJOR JACK DUNNING.

Head of the Highways, St. Louis, Mo.

Sir:—We are all on the go, but pay no attention to the sort of army or the time. There are some in the command who are anxious, and they are not right. I am one of them, and I am afraid that they are right. I am here, and I am ready for anything. I am the best of all, and I am ready to go. I am not afraid, and I am ready to fight. I am ready to go, and I am ready to fight.

Yours truly,

Major Jack Dunning.

Our subscribers will find veritable gold in the latest and most comprehensive issues of the "Black Republican," with its thorough and timely analysis of the political and social landscape of the time. The "Black Republican" is the embodiment of a new era, where the voices of the disenfranchised are given a platform to advocate for their rights and freedoms. As we progress, we must continue to support publications like this, as they play a crucial role in shaping public opinion and encouraging the fight for equality and justice for all.

As for the "Black Republican," its articles are a testament to the resilience and determination of the African American community. The editors and contributors are steadfast in their commitment to bring light to the issues facing their community, and their efforts are commendable.

Looking ahead, we must remain vigilant in our pursuit of justice and equality. Legal challenges and political machinations are not the only obstacles we face; we must also be prepared to navigate the minefield of social and cultural norms that seek to undermine our progress. But with a commitment to our principles and a strong base of support, we can overcome these challenges and move forward.

In conclusion, the "Black Republican" is not just a publication; it is a symbol of the hopes and dreams of a people striving for a better future. It is a beacon of light in a world that often seeks to obscure the voices of the marginalized. We must continue to support such publications, as they are crucial to the advancement of our society.
