THE BORROWER.

A commoner's story.

It was about twenty miles from town that there was nothing but the road and a house. Square was quarrelled with his horses and the horses ran away. No one knew where they went until the next day, when the horses were found dead in a field.

The story was told that the old man had been killed by the horses. The old man was a farmer and he had been working on his farm all day. When he went inside the house, he found that the horses were dead. He cried and went to the nearest town to tell his story. In the town, he found a shop that sold horses and asked if they had any for sale. They told him that they did not. He asked if they had any horses that were sick or dying and they told him that they did. He bought one of the horses and took it home. The horse died soon after he bought it. He told his friends about the horse and they told him that he was a fool. He said that he was not a fool and that he would buy another horse. He bought another horse and it died soon after he bought it. He told his friends that he would never buy another horse. His friends said that he was right.

HOLIDY WINTER

We are very sorry at the present time that we can give no news of those who are in our service, nor have we any, nor shall have any, news of any of our people. We are all informed that the people of the country, with one consent, are determined to support the government in every way in which it may seem necessary to them.

The Times at Fredericksborch

The Whig party is in this country at present, but it seems to be in a state of excitement, and the excitement is increasing. There is no doubt that the Whigs will be defeated, and the people of the country will show their good sense by electing the men who will best serve their interests.

Prohibition of the bottle.

The old law against the bottle has been repealed in the new law, and the bottle will be sold at public sale. This is a great step forward, and we hope it will be followed by other reforms. The bottle is the cause of many evils, and it is time it should be abolished.

The Battle of Fredericksburg

The battle of Fredericksburg was a great victory for the Union, and it is to be hoped that it will be followed by a similar victory at Gettysburg. The rights of the Union must be preserved at all costs, and the people of the country must unite in the support of the government.

Correspondence.

From the Army of the Potomac

The weather is very cold, and the soldiers are suffering from the cold. It is to be hoped that the government will take steps to alleviate the suffering of the soldiers. The government owes a duty to its soldiers, and it is time that it should be performed.

Worship with the Indians

The government has sent a commission to the Indian tribes, to visit them and to preach the gospel to them. This is a great step forward, and we hope it will be followed by other reforms. The Indians are a noble people, and they deserve the best that the government can give them.

The New peach tree.

The new peach tree has been planted in our garden, and it is to be hoped that it will grow and flourish. The peach is a fruit that is good for the body, and it is to be hoped that it will be cultivated and enjoyed by the people of the country.
