The Valley Spirit, Chambersburg, Pa.

July 13, 1854.

When our attention was first called to the extensive idea of a new temple containing a large and imposing edifice, intended to be erected in the city of Philadelphia, and to which the name of "Memorial" has been given, we expressed our belief that the enterprise would be attended with most important consequences to the cause of Popular Government. The public mind, we thought, would be afforded an opportunity of manifesting its respect for the memory of Washington, and of those who have contributed to his repute. The result has been, however, very different from our expectations. The plan has been carried into execution with great fertility of invention, and the building is now nearly completed. It will be a monument to the memory of Washington, and will be a source of pleasure to all who visit it. The building is to be 600 feet long, and 300 feet wide, and will be surrounded by an arcade of columns. It is to be the scene of public meetings, and will accommodate 10,000 persons. The cost of the building will be $200,000. The site is in the heart of the city, and is a most convenient place for the purpose. The plan is to be exhibited at the next annual meeting of the Board of Directors. It is to be completed in two years, and will be ready for use in 1856. The building is to be erected on the site of the old hotel, which was burned by the British in 1812. The name "Memorial" is to be inscribed on the pediment of the building, and will be a fitting memorial of the hero of the Revolution. The cost of the building will be borne by subscription, and the work is to be done by the best artists in the country. The plan is to be exhibited at the next annual meeting of the Board of Directors. It is to be completed in two years, and will be ready for use in 1856.
