

MAKING CALLS.

BY KAREN CAMERON.

"Let this plain truth through laurel wreaths...

"Mary," said Charles Henderson to his wife, as they rose from their noon...

"I suppose I could," was the reply, "but I should have to like Charley...

"Well, then, draw Charley down to the store and I'll take care of him," said Mr. Henderson kindly...

It was a lovely day in October, and the breeze stole gently through the crimson vine leaves...

After a brief call, Mary left, and as the iron gate again closed behind her, she gave a sigh of relief...

At last Mrs. Livermore entered, wearing a wrapper which might once have been of rich cashmere...

On the afternoon in question those repining thoughts thronged unbidden round her heart...

"Oh, dear! I've nothing fit to wear," my black silk looks so dowdy, and then I've worn it so much...

"Before conning her outer wrappings, however, she prepared her twelve-month toy for his visit to Papa's store..."

Jane helped her mistress to draw the little carriage down the steps, and out of the gate...

"She met several ladies who stopped to kiss Charley, and call him a 'jewel,' 'a beauty,' and 'a splendid baby'..."

Her first destination was Mrs. Judge Thornton's, the brown stone house on the hill; she was one of the elite of Westbury...

She ascended the marble steps, and rang the bell, and was aided by a servant into a dimly lighted parlor...

Just then the rustle of brocade was heard, and Mrs. Thornton languidly entered the room...

That evening, after Charles had returned to his store, and little Charley had been undressed, Mary was seated at her work table...

At last Mrs. Livermore entered, wearing a wrapper which might once have been of rich cashmere...

from whose windows she already saw a light gleaming invitingly...

"Had a good time, Mary?" was his first inquiry.

"Yes, Charles, it has been truly a good time, for I have learned a lesson this afternoon which I trust will be life-long in its good results."

was scarcely reported to General Gage. The fact soon got into the hands of our fellows...

That very evening, wrapped in his usual general coat put out for him as when the Park Street Church was closed...

He had a good time, Mary? was his first inquiry.

"Yes, Charles, it has been truly a good time, for I have learned a lesson this afternoon which I trust will be life-long in its good results."

THE TAILOR AND DEAN SWIFT.

A tailor in Dublin, near the residence of the Dean, took it into his head that he was specially and devoutly inspired to retrace the prophetic...

He had not been waiting long, when a white object came gliding rapidly towards him. He advanced into the street, to get a nearer view, and to his astonishment...

In due time the British evader, Boston, and the American ally, another Gen. Washington, entered and took possession of the room...

"Say what you will," said one of the British troops, "I have got pick—that you can't deny."

That evening, after Charles had returned to his store, and little Charley had been undressed, Mary was seated at her work table...

At last Mrs. Livermore entered, wearing a wrapper which might once have been of rich cashmere...

"Oh, dear! I've nothing fit to wear," my black silk looks so dowdy...

Valley Spirit.

CHAMBERSBURG, OCT. 30, 1861.

A Fresh Trouble.

Notwithstanding the charges made against Gen. Fremont, the Administration still permits him to remain in command of a most important division of the army. The laws of Congress and the orders of the President have been treated by him with contempt, he seems to care nothing for the public sentiment of the country, and yet he is continued in office. Why is this? The President has the power in his hands to remove him at once...

Secessionists, &c.

The absolute folly, (to call it by no worse name) of stigmatising Democrats as "secessionists," &c., is fully apparent since the election. If the Republicans and their allies told the truth when they thus denounced the Democracy, then there is a secession majority in one branch of the Legislature, and the "secessionists" have a large majority of the popular vote.

One of the funny consequences of the Republicans arrogating to themselves the name of "Union" party exhibits itself in giving the election returns. To style one of the parties Union, in contradistinction to the others, would make it appear that the friends of the Union were but a small minority in the State.

General Sherman, in Kentucky, is making estimates for funds to supply 80,000 soldiers, the number that he expects his command will reach in a short time. The rebel force under Beckner is estimated at between 20,000 and 40,000 men.

General McClellan. No man in this country, says the Patriot & Union, now occupies so perilous an eminence as the young leader of our armies, General McClellan. Much is expected from him, and if he fails to fulfill public anticipation, he must sink into comparative obscurity. The people confide in him as a great general—the destined leader to victory—the chief aim who is to indicate the pathway to success.

The tendency to exaggeration is a national failing. No man is half a hero or half a scoundrel. We rush to extremes in dealing with our public men and military leaders. We put a fabulous estimate upon their abilities and then treat them as impostors if they fail to come up to the standard of extravagant expectation. The nation is constantly bowing down to some popular idol.

General McClellan's position is extremely perilous. Those who have set him up on the highest pinnacle of greatness will be the first to cast him down if he makes a single mis-step. We trust that he will be able to justify the laurels with which he has already been crowned.

Alas, Why?

The Philadelphia News, one of the most bitter-tongued opposers of the Democracy in the country, makes some complaint over the defeat of the "People's Party" (Republican), and asks some significant questions:

Twelve months ago the People's Party swept the State of Pennsylvania as would a whirlwind, and its victorious banner was carried throughout the country with a success which is almost without a precedent. Why is it that the great party that pleasured Andrew G. Curtin in the gubernatorial Chair, is to-day so weak? Why, that the party who carried the banner of Lincoln and Hamlin throughout the Old Keystone State, and which sent it to Washington with majorities of thousands emblazoned upon its folds, droops to-day under such heavy clouds?

Yes, why is it? Let the sad state of the country, and the outraged confidence of the people answer.

Henry Ward Beecher, for a clergyman, uses some queer language. For example, here is a choice extract from one of his recent sermons. Had it been spoken by a layman, outside the Church, it would be called blasphemy. But, being said by a Beecher, it is embalmed with the "odor of sanctity."

"Slavery will go to hell where it came from. We shall conquer the rebels, not in our own strength, but the Almighty Lord will lay them over our knees, and we will speak them in the natural order of Providence!"

A PH Subject for Post Lafayette.

In a letter dated Washington, Oct. 14th, 1861, "Occasional" of the Philadelphia Press, tells us "that the result of the election in Philadelphia, is claimed as a triumph of the Southern Confederacy, and that the sympathisers with treason will now take heart and speak boldly. They will oppose the war tax. Every fabrication, no matter how monstrous or how ridiculous, against the men in authority here, will be circulated, in order to create a settled prejudice against the cause of the country."

This is decidedly inouvent. Notwithstanding it is barely possible to find even one man in the State who opposes this war, or is a "sympathiser with treason," the Press, and a number of others, keep up a continual howl about "treason in the North." Of course these treasonable persons are always Democrats. Abolitionists may cry for the general emancipation of the slaves, and declare themselves opposed to this war if such is their object, and these men "who have cast party to the winds" never say aught against it.

The true policy of the friends of the Union, it strikes us, is to hold up the Northern people as firmly united in support of this war (and, excepting the abolitionists, they are united), and not encourage rebellion by representing the North as divided. Yet a prominent official at Washington encourages the South by fabricating a story, in effect, that the people of Pennsylvania have expressed, through the ballot box, opposition to this war. Aside from the base slander it contains against the people of the good old Keystone, this story will do the cause of our country much harm.

The patriotism of government contractors is notorious everywhere; but it is particularly prominent in Cincinnati. The Gazette, of that city, has been looking over the subscription books to the government loan, and remarks: "We were a good deal surprised at not finding among the subscribers any of the heavy government contractors," and that "there are houses here that have made from fifty thousand to a hundred thousand dollars on contracts, and yet they have not contributed one dollar to the loan."

In less than a year after the overwhelming success and advent to power of the Republicans, the Democracy compelled them to attempt to hide their principles under Democratic names and to abandon the very designation by which their party was known.

Henry S. Magraw, of Pennsylvania, who went to Minnesota for the body of Col. Cameron, and was taken to Richmond a prisoner, has been released and returned to Lancaster.

The Position.

A glance along the line of the army shows one of the most remarkable views which the world has ever presented. In the history of civil wars heretofore, and in general in the history of wars between nation and nation, the contest has been confined to one or two prominent points at a time, and the lines of armies have been extended but a few miles.

Beginning at Fortress Monroe, says the Journal of Commerce, and passing thence to Annapolis, Baltimore, Washington and westward, we find the vast hosts of the Northern and Middle States, numbered by hundreds of thousands, stretching their camps along the Potomac or occupying the most important strategic positions between the ocean and the mountains.

For eighty years the name of the United States of America has been on the roll of nations. During that time it has assumed a steadily increasing importance. Feble at first, and not recognized as having a voice among the great powers, it has become strong, its fleets sailing on every sea, its citizens the equal of princes in every land, and its voice has been as loud and effective in decreeing the destinies of the world as the voice of any nation, however ancient.

It is humiliating to our pride to reflect that the world would go on. We have not been omnipotent, though we have boasted our invincibility. We have not been so important to the equilibrium of power, though we have laughed at the thought of calamity, and believed ourselves immortal.

But this is no ordinary crisis in the history of a nation, and the question which is now discussed along this line of a thousand miles is one whose decision will cover many pages of the world's history to be read a thousand years hence. It will not be mere history to be felt for ages. If the country be stricken down, in the splendor of her strength, the world's history will charge thenceforth. If the Union be sustained, the future of the nation will be from strength to strength.

Ohio Election.

The election in this State resulted in the success of the Union State Ticket, by a very large majority, and the Union county tickets have generally been successful.

The Pony Express to California will be suspended as soon as the telegraph line opens to San Francisco.

Why do our soldiers need no bayonets? Because they are regularly shaved by the Government contractors.

Emancipation as a Means of Subduing Rebellion.

Notwithstanding Congress solemnly resolved that the war was not waged for emancipation, the Abolition press of the country is determined that emancipation shall be declared by the Government, and is persistently agitating to accomplish this purpose. It is confident that a proclamation declaring the freedom of the slaves would materially assist in putting down rebellion and restoring the Union.

This sounds very pretty—but like the old receipt for cooking a fish, which had the important preliminary instruction, to first catch the fish—the great difficulty is to first catch the negro before proceeding to confer upon him the blessing of freedom. Gen. Fremont tried the virtue of a proclamation of emancipation in Missouri. Was it followed by favorable consequences to the Union cause? Let the series of disasters in that State, closing with Lexington, answer. It certainly produced little good impression upon the negro, and worked considerable mischief to the Union cause in Missouri and Kentucky.

The whole agitation of this subject is a practical absurdity, as irrational as all the theories of the crazy Abolitionists. But they are never easy unless plotting some sort of mischief. Happily the Government turns a deaf ear to their utterances. We have no idea that the policy of emancipation will be attempted—and have therefore confined ourselves to exposing its utterly and absurdity as a means of suppressing rebellion.

The Hon. Charles Sumner has favored us with a copy of his late speech before the Republican State Convention of Massachusetts. Its theme is slavery, of a course—Mr. Sumner can think, write, speak, of nothing else; and his argument is for emancipation as the only sure way to restore Union and Peace. This is the abolitionist's view of the question. But it will take stronger reasonings than any Mr. Sumner has here presented, to convince us that immediate emancipation would be any benefit either to the slave or white population of our country, or that it would facilitate the Union cause in its conflict with the Southern rebellion.

State Election.

The following is said to be the result of the election in this State for Representatives in the lower House of the Legislature:

The Democrats made rather a clean thing of it in this State at the late election.

The Battle at Ball's Bluff.

We extract from the Philadelphia Inquirer the following comments on the recent appalling disaster to our army at Ball's Bluff.

The mind sickens over the contemplation of it. Hundreds more or less vital meet the eye, and are present to the planet understanding from the beginning to the end of the fatal movement. Troops (led) in force and unopposed were shown into the enemy's country, without any adequate knowledge of either his numbers or his whereabouts. These troops were almost wholly untrained, because there was a deep, broad and rapid river between them and their reserves, and no means of transportation but one or three flimsy rafts of the capacity of about fifty men apiece. In this condition of affairs many hours were consumed in ferrying reinforcements to the amount of a few hundred across the river.

And all this within any beneficial result. As we have remarked, the best officers over such a catastrophe, whereas many brave men, fighting against overwhelming odds, had their valiant courage, their lofty heroism, and their indomitable efforts, all paralyzed and themselves sacrificed by the blinding incapacity of their responsible chiefs.

First Telegraphic Message, by the Overland Route.

New York, October 25. The overland California telegraph has been completed. The following message was received this afternoon: SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25. To the Mayor of New York—San Francisco to New York sends greetings, and congratulates her on the completion of the enterprize which connects the Pacific with the Atlantic. May the prosperity of both cities be increased thereby, and the projects of this important work met with honor and reward. (Signed) H. F. LACHEMERE, Mayor of San Francisco.

Notice.

We want money—or rather our creditors do. Our ready cash in their possession. If they are done using it, to hand it over that we may be enabled to keep the "wolf from our door." Don't neglect to put that small trifle, that you owe the printer, in your pocket when you come to town. We will be most happy to see one and all who know themselves indebted to us, and we have the assurance of those who have never tried the experiment that a man never feels so happy in his life as at the present moment he pays off his indebtedness to his printer.

CURE FOR THE EAR ACHE.—Take a small piece of cotton batting, or cotton wool, make a depression in the centre with the end of the finger, and fill it with as much ground pepper as will rest on a five cent piece, gather into a ball and tie it up, dip the ball into sweet oil and insert it in the ear, covering the latter with cotton wool, and use a bandage or cap to retain it in its place. Almost instant relief will be experienced, and the application is so gentle that an infant will not be injured by it, but experience relief as well as adults.

TO CURE THE CROUP.—The following is highly recommended by an exchange: "A piece of fresh lard, as large as a butternut, rubbed up with sugar, in the way that butter and sugar are prepared for the dressing of puddings, divided into three parts, and given at intervals of twenty minutes, will relieve any case of croup which is not already allowed to progress to the fatal point."

"Do not give up the Union. Preserve it in the name of the Fathers of the Revolution—preserve it for its great elements of good—preserve it in the sacred name of Liberty—preserve it for the faithful and devoted lovers of the Constitution in the rebelious States—those who are recruited for its support, and are dying in its defence. Rebellion can lay down her arms to Government—Government cannot surrender to rebellion."—Hon. Daniel S. Dickinson, of New York.

ABUNDANT.—Chessnut. Everybody gets them and the consequences can be better imagined than described.
