The Peace Bubble Explodes

While the mission of Blair was involved in mystery, many men in our land believed that it remained with President Davis alone to have peace or war as he might prefer and that he would elect war. Contrary to their expectations a committee of three distinguished and prominent men were sent to confer with the Administration of the United States upon the prospect of a speedy adjustment of the existing difficulties. Scarcely had they left before some not in our Valley were wiser to say, decided that the Southern Government would not allow itself to be strangled by the Union. Strange conduct, when the mere anticipation of the troubles the South would be called upon to endure from the rule of Abraham Lincoln, caused the sole of secession and the formation of an independent Government among the millions of the blood of thousands of the brave men of the South to maintain that independence, while the war has been prosecuted against us with a more ferocious malignity than ever characterized the benighted nations of a former age. The moment when the Union was broken, we secure all that we here thus long coveted. Messrs Lincoln and Seward, however, speedily dispelled this delusion, for they said to our Commissioners, they would agree to nothing less than our unconditional submission to the rule of the United States, and all laws passed under its forms, that is, the cancellation law to be enforced and the penalty of treason to be meted out to all of us.

What think our reconstructionists now? They still uphold President Davis as the champion of the Union, unwilling to reconstruct the Union? Will they yield up their all and submit to the doom of traitors, or will they stand up like men and yet strike a blow that will indicate the despatch of the North and leave them to their own devices, and let our rights and laws maintain them?

We opine that the idea of speedy peace other than through the success of our arms has vanished forever from the Southern mind, that reconstruction will be the only thing that will bring any relief to the South from this day the entire North will stand firm united and determined that at any period of this struggle for liberty.

Let the speculator and croaker cease their respective endeavors to accumulate and to cavil at this or that, and let the man of sense and honor, who has attained to that success which ultimately awaits us, being willing rather to give our all to sacrifice ourselves for the cause of liberty and independence, than to see our lands and tenements, our sacred places and our dearest friends, all in the hands of the traitor-troops, who are endeavoring to tear every vestige of liberty from this continent, while we would be compelled to stand aside and suffer the penalty of treason. God forbid that such a fate should ever befall the noble people of our beloved Confederacy and with his help, with an united effort on our part, it never will.

Last week we published the resignation of the Brigadier General and this was the case of the 52d and 51st Va Regts. of Pegram's Brigade to which we refer our readers.

While many were canvassing in their minds prospective reconstruction, these scattered veterans only thought of their own safety and the safety of their own stout hearts and strong arms. With them there has been no reconstruction, no never! Their feelings are those expressed in the language of a lady of Augusta, whose beautiful poetical flourish we published a few weeks since.

My dear friend, never I leave! Independence forever! God bless shall be a nation, glorious, independent!

Let us all who may have felt that their dearest and loved the army, read these resolutions, which are similar in tone and sentiment to those which have been passed already by nearly every regiment in the army, and take courage from their noble brethren in the field.

It will be gratifying to the many friends of Gen. A. W. HANNAH to learn that he arrived at home in Central Texas on Wednesday morning, the 27th inst. He was captured by Gen. Cassin's Brigade, and was captured in July 1862 and sent to Johnsons Island, where he has remained since a prisoner of war.

His health, owing to his close confinement is somewhat shattered, but his spirits are unbroken and we trust that his arrival at home, surrounded by his family and immediate relatives, together with a host of warm friends will in a very short time restore him to his usual health.

On returning to his native home, more than ever impressed upon his mind, was the firm belief in the success of our cause, and we doubt not that every man's hands pass over, shall see him again in the saddle, at the head of his gallant regiment, ready and anxious to fight another day for the honor of his country and friends.

His Farewell. A. L. S. B. G. Co. 5th Va Regt, and Frank Sullivan Co. 1st Va Regt, sent to Gen. A. W. HANNAH, at the residence of the Military Council of the Corps. We trust that the cheering spirit of their desertion and robbery.

WAR IN THE VALLEY. From Staunton, Va. The following is a copy of a picket report from Gen. Lee's camp on Sunday, and a portion of their force reached the Valley, and crossed Hatfield's camp, and skimming had taken place, but there has been no movement as yet. The object of the movement is not yet determined.

The enemy were busily engaged in running their trains on Saturday night, supposing that they had used their troops from the front. The commanding officer, general to the country.

At three o'clock, the shell fired, and the men of the Union Artillery, for a few moments, they were marching in the direction of the front.

The enemy moved in strong force yesterday to Hatfield's Regt. Part of his infantry, with Gregg's cavalry, crossed and proceeded on the Va. road to the front. The cavalry to Dinwiddie Court House, where it straddled and entered a portion of our cavalry and retreated. In the afternoon parts of Hills and Gordon's troops debouched on this line, and the Regt. of Hatcher's Regt., near the front of our cavalry and retreated.

General Lee reports to the War Department a very creditable account of the Valley. It seems that about eight of the enemy surprised our cavalry pickets at Edinburg, and captured a lieutenant and four men of the 1st and 2nd Regts. of the 12th Virginia Cavalry, pursued and overtook the Cavalry at Woodstock, where they attacked and routed the party, capturing our pickets and their officer, and killing sixteen of the enemy and twenty horses.
