WAR NEWS

We are sorry that we are unable to give our readers any very late intelligence from our armies either in Virginia or North Carolina.

The interruption of communication, both by land and by water, caused by Sheridan and his vandals, our apology for the paucity of news this week.

Not having the most implicit confidence in the various reports in circulation (relative to our armies) based upon the authority of Mr. Adams, and some reliable gentlemen, we are compelled to confine ourselves to the dispatches of Gen. Lee (published below) and some extracts from the Lynchburg Republican of the 18th inst., handed us by a friend, believing that they contain the only authentic information up to that period.

HEADLINE, March 9, 1865.

Gen. Bragg reports that he attacked the enemy yesterday, four miles in front of Kingston, and drove him from his position. He captured the ground completely, and took a new line three miles from his front.

He captured three pieces of artillery and seven hundred prisoners. The number of the enemy's dead and wounded left on the field is large. Our loss was comparatively small.

The troops behaved most heroically.

Gen. Grant and Lee destroyed their accustomed camp and galleys.

General R. E. LEE.

HEADLINE, March 10, 1865.

Gen. Hampton attacked Klipartick at daylight this morning and drove him from camp, capturing his wagons, many horses and several hundred prisoners, and a large number of our men who had been captured.

The guns and wagons could not be brought off of camp.

Many of the enemy were killed and wounded.

Our loss was not heavy.

Lieut. Col. B. L. King was killed, and Brig. Gen. James C. Hays and Major James H. Ferguson and others were wounded.

General R. E. LEE.

Later accounts in the Republican state that Gen. Bragg, on the day after the fight at Kingston, was compelled by force of superior numbers to fall back in the direction of Goldsboro.

We are also indebted to the Petersburg Express for a little more information in relation to the fight between Gen. Hampton and Klipartick.

It will be to say the least very amusing to our readers. The Editor states that he is informed through private sources, that the attack of Hampton was like a like thunderbolt from a cloudy sky, and of course a most complete surprise.

Klipartick was aroused from his slumbers—all the more profound because it was the early morning and had barely time to leap from his couch, enrobed in only night and socks.

But when he awoke, he found the weather was cold, and the rain was falling fast, and the Georgia uniform at such a time, was of all others the least calculated to contribute to one's comfort.

There was no time to procure warmer clothing. The Georgia uniform, in fact, was the only alternative, and of the two evils, General Klipartick ordered the former.

It is said that his coat, pantaloons, boots, spurs, pistols and sword, fell into the hands of our men, and we can well imagine how they felt when they saw the prize such trophies. Gen. Klipartick for once realized the truth of the couplet: "That he who 'don't fight,' but runs away, will live to fight another day."

From the Raleigh Progress of the 13th inst., we learn that the enemy occupied the town of Salisbury, and that our forces were following back in the direction of Raleigh. A concentration of all our forces, and a big battle was this place is thought probable. The same paper of the 15th inst. reports that a rumor is in circulation that the advance of our troops was miles from Raleigh. It is also stated that Yankee troops were moving at the same time towards Goldsboro.

From Richmond we learn that Grant is sending troops to the north, and that the James River is to be used for the purpose of crossing the river.

This is a very true, and that the attack will be on our right, with the hope of getting possession of the Southside Railroad.

The following dispatch of Gen. R. L. Lee was received:

HEADLINE, March 20th 1865.

Gen. J. E. Johnson reports that about 7 P. M. on the 19th inst. he attacked the enemy near Beatonville, routing him, capturing three guns.

A mile in the rear he rallied upon fresh troops, but was forced back slowly about 2 P. M. with a slight loss of men. He was completely routed, and the army was routed with difficulty.

FROM THE BEST INFORMATION WE CAN GIVE

From the best information we can give, we give the following statement of the late battle in North Carolina. It is the result of a battle in North Carolina, and one of the most important of the war.

It broke camp at Winchester on Monday 27th ult. and reached Stanton on Thursday morning and pushed on to Waynesboro, meeting and scattering Gen. Early's small force at that place, capturing it, was supposed by persons who saw them pass through Stanton, about six or seven hundred prisoners, and several pieces of artillery, and reached Rockfish Gap to Greensboro that night. He entered Charlottesville Friday 3rd inst. about 2 P. M. The Mayor and Council having surrendered the town and received protection.

He remained here until the 10th A. M., when he moved in two columns, the Lynchburg and Scottsville roads, the first column leaving the Lynchburg road, moved in the direction of and struck James River at New Market, thence this river, moving down by the foot of the mountain from Scottsville, to Columbia, whence they diverged in the direction of the Va Central R. R., which they struck at some point between Louisa C. H. and Beaver Dam, and it is supposed have very far around our extreme left flank on Monday at 10 A. M., when they crossed the bridges and defiles, except at Charlottesville, on the Central Road from Stanton to Shawville, to the track of the Charlottesville and Lynchburg R. R. about 6 miles from Charlottesville, and destroyed the bridge and destroyed the bridge and destroyed the bridge.

They burned the locks and otherwise damaged the canal from New Market to Columbia, and it is supposed have destroyed the track of the Central Road at and for some distance beyond Beaver Dam.

Gen. Hampton attacked Klipartick at daylight this morning and drove him from camp, capturing his wagons, many horses and several hundred prisoners, and a large number of our men who had been captured.

The guns and wagons could not be brought off of camp.
